Note Explanatory of the Generations.

The "generations" of this work denotes the generations of the heads of families. For example, the fifth generation embraces the fifth generation of heads of families while the children of these really belong to the sixth generation and those children who became heads of families appear again as such under the sixth generation.

INTRODUCTION.

History of the Name of Adams, Adam, Adamch, Adame and Adames.

The family name of Adams is very common in England and America. It occurs under five different forms, namely: Adam, Adame, Adames, Adamch and Adams.

Under the Norman conquest in 1067 we find the name Philipo Adam and Johanus Adam. In 1141 under the influence of the Norman conquest we find Jacobus Adam. In the old Norman pronunciation the accent would seem to be on the first "A" as Adam; in the Saxon on the second "A" as Adam. The soft sound of "s" in the Anglo-Saxon was not common, more frequently a soft "c h" as Adamch. Hence the various spellings would indicate the same pronunciation.

The name of Adam and Adame were widely disseminated in the 13th and 14th centuries throughout the principal parts of England where the Saxon and Norman element was established. It would appear by the "Chronicles of Kent" that the "s" was added in the reign of Henry VII.

In the memoirs of the Earl of Warwick or Warwic and also in the history of Canterbury the name Adame is referred to as a time honored name among "Ye yeoman of ye land in ye lowe countries, etc."

The "low countries" referred to the Netherlands (see history of Canterbury page 141, Westminster, 1791.) In the year 1417 in the reign of Henry V, in consequence of a new invasion of France, the Duke of Burgundy and his partisans became involved in a disagreement which caused an insurrection of the people. One Lile Adam one of the Duke's captains, with Jacobus and Jahanus Adam, incited the people to revolt against their tyrannical oppressors, in consequence of which the people became riotous and disorderly: destruction of property followed, murders were committed, etc. In 1419 the Duke of Burgundy was murdered. (see David Hume's History of England, Packard's edition, Vol. 2, page 70.)

It will be noticed in reviewing English history that the name Adame and Adams appear in connection with these events, showing conclusively that the name Adams is a derivation from Adam, Adame, Adamch, Adames, etc.

In the reign of Henry VII in consequence of a mixture of adverse national elements a change was evolving in style of dress and deportment, spelling of words and pronunciation of them, grammatical terms, also in manners and customs of the people. Hence I assume these are reasonable causes for the slight change in the name and pronunciation of the word Adams.

Dismissing the question of similiarity of names and pronunciation of them I will now proceed to investigate whether these names are connected together by one ancestral chain or not: that there are missing links in the chain is self-evident. The absence of dates constitutes these missing links but these details could not be expected in English history. Therefore I will investigate in a general way.

In the reign of Edward IV the name Robert Adame appears in the insurrection, at Yorkshire, as a follower of Sir Henry Nevil in 1468. In the reign of Richard III in 1483 the name Edward Adame appears as a follower of Henry, Earl of Richmond. In the reign of Henry VII in 1488 the name Philipo Adams appears. According to our family record and tradition. Philipo Adams crossed the Bristol channel to Glamorganshire, South Wales, and married Hilpa Anderson and returned to Kent but there is no date to this. The similiarity of names of Nathaniel Adam's children would indicate this, namely: Philip and Hilpa A. As the primitive inhabitants of Wales were of Celtic origin, the name Hilpa Anderson would not seem to be of that element, it would rank more with the Danes and Northmen. That they came to Wales is quite evident from the fact that they were a seafaring people and even reached our New England coast, as is claimed, before the 10th century. On general conclusions I assume that Nathaniel was a descendant from the Norman and Saxon line of Adams or Adame.

Ann Ascue, Nicholas Belenian and John Lassells. This was done by order direct from the King and carried out and executed by Chancellor Wriothesely who seemed to exult, and excite the people to praise the King's religious work. (See David Hume's History of England, Packards' edition, Albany, 1816, Vol. 2, page 442-3.)

According to family tradition there were three brothers; the name of the other brother is not known.

He married Susanna Dorman in 1750. She descended from Thomas D. Warren, an officer in Cromwell's army, also from Sir John Jones, who married Catharine the sister of O. Cromwell. The Dormans had to flee to America to save their lives. Stephen died January 6, 1811. Susanna, born April 8, 1730, died May 8, 1809. Ephriam Warren the father of T. D. Warren was a cousin to Richard Warren of the Mayflower. (See early settlers of New England, Boston, 1789, page 41.) It has been claimed that Stephen was the son of William, but there is plenty of family proof to the contrary.

(See Munsell's Ancestry, Vol. 9, page 121.) Capt. John and his father were both in the French war. The Holt and Adams family were closely connected by marriage. Maud lives at Barricoa, Cuba and Susie at Barcelona, Spain. There is no way of tracing between Charles and Israel (63.)

A History of the Evarts Family.

History of the Evarts Family.

HISTORY OF THE NAME.

---

The family name Evarts is no doubt derived from Evers or Everts. Evarts in the common way of pronunciation retains the sound of e. The A is lost in English history. The death of Ralph Evers and his cousin Bryon Latoum at the battle of Ancram in 1545 and the defeat of their hosts and devastation of the country caused a change in dialect spelling and pronunciation of words, etc. (See Rahway's Pronouncing Dictionary, page 61. Westminster, 1798. See also Chronicles of Canterbury, chapt. 3, sec. 9, 1749.) Evers became Everts. The following verse is taken from a collection of simple old sailor songs printed about 1570 :

*Anne Everts is my name,
Canterbury is my home,
My eyes are jst as sparklinge
As those of Anne Boleyn.*

In all classes of English literature the a is lost. In conclusion I would assume that Everts is the proper name.

First Generation. Family 1.*1 WILLIAM.

Born at Tortworth, Gloucestershire, England, 1569-70 ; married Sarah Everhard, 1593, who inherited an interest in the Everhard estate of Hertfordshire. The Everhards were closely connected by marriage with the famous Hicks family who bore coats of arms and descended from Sir Ellis Hicks who was Knighted by Edward the Black Prince at the battle of Poitiers, Sept. 19, 1356. ( See Foster's edition of the Baronetage, page 311, 1881.) It is also recorded that Sarah and William Everts died at an advanced age in Hertfordshire.

14 Samuel (9,) b Dec. 14, 1681, d Dec. 5, 1692.

The last five of these were living in 1693.

[ There is an error in Savage, stating the last five were living in 1693. When Samuel 14-(9) is the last in the order named and recorded as dying in 1792. Hence an error. Hannah 9-5 is no doubt the one dying before 1793. Langdon records the death of Samuel 14—1760, which agrees with the lineage of Earls on. See Colonial register. ]

FAMILY 15

25 MOSES.

Born at Stratford, Conn., June 13, 1689, died there 1761. There were three by the name of Moses. There is great obscurity here and no doubt some errors. It is recorded on quite good authority that his father was a half brother to Benjamin 1st, who came to America in 1691 and that the name was Merrill in England. It is stated in the Colonial Register, page 91, that the Merrills came in the ship "Mary and John" in 1681 and were intermarried with the Merriman family. It is also stated that Ruth Merrill married Noel Adams of the presidential line and died at the age of 112 years. This statement would seem to involve other discrepancies; on general conclusions there is a missing link to complete the ancestral chain. According to Dr. John Merriman's record under date of 1809, he married Martha Beach in Guilford, in 1718 and it also records his birth at Bristol, Conn.; was Captain of troops and died in 1751.

CHILDREN :

50 Benjamin (21.) b Aug. 1, 1720, at Guilford, Conn.

51 Ruth, d young.

52 Sarah, d in infancy.

No mention is made of the last two children in the family records. The birth year of his wife is a mistake of nearly 80 years, no doubt a misprint. There is consequently no record of his wife. There are discrepancies in this family (15) that cannot be explained satisfactorily.
